The main focus of the training will be the issue of social inclusion and steps the universities can take towards more inclusive programmes, so the priority will be on the methodology and best practices on inclusive course design as well as the students' contribution in designing inclusive curricula.

This will be achieved by providing staff and faculty members with insights and best practices on how to make their study programmes more inclusive by adjusting their current courses, introducing new ones and adopting field work in social activities as part of their curricula.

So, there will be workshops focusing on the two thematic areas which will be delivered by experienced staff and faculty members of the Aristotle University of Thessaloniki:
